Project MUSE - Bread, or Bullets!: Urban Labor and Spanish ... Urban Labor and Spanish Colonialism in Cuba, 1850-1898, opens an important new area of research as it delves into the formation of an urban working class, comprised mostly of tobacco workers, and its intimate relationship to the linked processes of slave emancipation and the acquisition of independence from Spain. Casanovas challenges the teleology of narratives that see in the mid-nineteenth century rise of the labor movement the origins of a militancy that culminated in 1959.
